A LETTER FROM THE STUDIO

The Mighty Ducks are coming!

No, I'm not talking about Huey, Dewey and Louie. In this case, the "ducks" are human and they'll be coming to a theater near you this October.

Six of them can be seen in the picture with me: Brandon Adams, J.D. Daniels, Marguerite Moreau, Eldon Ratliff, Garrette Ratliff, and (kneeling) Jussie Smollett. They play street-smart members of a peewee ice hockey team, The Mighty Ducks, that get frozen out of every game they play.

Then along comes Emilio Estevez, who plays an aggressive, super-competitive lawyer who gets convicted of driving under the influence. He is sentenced to community service, coaching the unruly team.

To tell this story as effectively as possible, we went to the heart of hockey country—Minneapolis, Minnesota. The city has 52 indoor ice rinks, 60 outdoor rinks and more than 2,000 youth hockey teams.

We got there in the middle of winter and found out there was one important thing Minneapolis didn't have—snow. The weather had turned unseasonably warm and the famous ice sculptures at St. Paul's Winter Carnival, where we wanted to film a key scene, had begun to melt. So, we had to call on our set designers to build a convincing replica of the Carnival at a nearby park.

Six weeks before filming was to start, the Mighty Ducks went into training. During the last weeks, Emilio joined them, going through the same daily drills as the kids.

We believe all the work has paid off. With the authenticity of its cast and setting, the film offers warmth and humor and tells a story the entire family can enjoy.

I hope you'll be joining us when the Mighty Ducks take the ice this October.

ARCHIVIST DAVE SMITH ON DISNEY FACTS, FIGURES, HISTORY AND TRIVIA

Readers with questions about Disney trivia can write to Dave Smith, c/o The Walt Disney Archives, 500 South Buena Vista St., Burbank, CA 91521.

Disney Facts

OUR READERS WANT TO KNOW

Do I detect uncanny similarities between the songs “Who’s Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?” and “Laughing Place” (from Song of the South)?

—A.N., Muscle Shoals, AL

While there are some similarities between the two songs, there was probably no conscious attempt to make them similar. “Who’s Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?” was loosely based on “Happy Birthday”; these songs obviously had a pattern that proved successful.

Can you tell me if the star of the new Disney Channel series Adventures in Wonderland, Elisabeth Harnois, starred in an earlier Disney film?

—J.T., Cornwall, NY

Elisabeth Harnois appeared in Walt Disney Pictures’ One Magic Christmas.

What does the improper fraction 10/6 on the Mad Hatter’s hat mean?

—T.H., Houston, TX

That’s not a fraction, but the price tag. 10/6 is the way the English used to write ten shillings six pence. Of course, now that the English have switched to a decimal system, they don’t use shillings any more.

Does the drop at Splash Mountain in Disneyland really go straight down from five stories?

—V.C., Phoenix, AZ

The drop is at a 47-degree angle. The 52 and 1/2-foot

Goofy’s first starring role in Goofy and Wilbur (1939) left its imprint. The always slightly befuddled character was more in demand, not only by the theater-going public, but by the Disney animators themselves. Goofy was a fun character to work with.

Director Jack Kinney set up an animation unit at the Disney Studio to turn out Goofy cartoons, and they soon hit on a successful formula—the “How to” series. When Disney’s distributors saw How to Ride a Horse, they realized it was so good that it would be wasted as a short, so they persuaded Walt Disney to include it in the feature The Reluctant Dragon (1941). No other Disney character had a series quite like Goofy’s “How to” series, which went on for over a decade. Why meddle with success? The cartoons were hilarious, as the bumbling Goofy tried to teach audiences, in what turned out to be ridiculous fashion, how to ski, swim, fish, dance, practice self defense, and how to play baseball, basketball, football, hockey, and golf among others. But what audiences saw was really “How not to.” This series has endeared Goofy to audiences, and the humor of the cartoons has proved timeless.

drop (equivalent to a five-story building) was, at Splash Mountain’s opening, the longest flume chute in the world.

Whatever happened to the Sherman Brothers songwriting team, a Disney feature mainstay for many years?

—D.G., Frederick, MD

The Sherman Brothers are currently working on a Broadway musical. Walt Disney Records has recently put out a CD (and cassette), The Sherman Brothers: Disney’s “Supercalifragilistic” Songwriting Team, honoring the career of Richard and Robert Sherman. Their last Disney projects were songs for EPCOT Center (1982).

"The Little Girl with a Curl"

It's broken! The little pot of flowers this "Little Girl With a Curl" prized so highly has been damaged. One look, and she scowls in childish dismay, stomps her foot, "boo hoos" for effect... and then waits for Mama to come and make things right.

"The Little Girl With a Curl" is an original issue in Dianna Effner's Mother Goose collection, a group of porcelain nursery-rhyme dolls that captures the magic of this artist's gift.

This "Little Girl" is crafted with a poseable head and limbs of bisque porcelain, hand-painted to capture her look of memorable frustration. Her brown eyes are hand-set for even more expression. Her Victorian-style dress features embroidered eyelet flounces, woven ribbon, and charming bow accents. She even comes with her own "broken" pot of fabric flowers that you may pose with her as you wish.

Recommended by Ashton-Drake, "The Little Girl With a Curl" is certified Premiere Grade—your assurance of superior artistry and craftsmanship. As an heirloom-quality doll with exceptional credentials, she may be a wise investment as well.

Bring this feisty little charmer into your home for only $79.00. But hurry... "The Little Girl With a Curl" is issued in a hand-numbered edition ending forever in 1992, after which molds for this doll will be broken and no more porcelain will ever be cast. Order today.

At School MAKING MUSIC

If music instruction in the schools were an animal, it would be on the endangered species list.

Cuts in state and local funding have threatened music education programs across the country, reducing the numbers of students who can participate in band, orchestra and chorus.

To highlight the impact music education can have on children, The Disney Channel, in cooperation with the Young Musicians Foundation and with support from the Yamaha Corporation of America, invited talented young musicians—their average is 11—to participate in a week-long Summer Music Camp in Los

TRIP TIPS: PRESERVING VACATION MEMORIES

The experiences of a family trip, whether a weekend getaway or a longer vacation, are inspiration enough for even the youngest traveler. With a few simple supplies and the following projects, your child will be well prepared when creativity strikes. Best of all, as she draws and writes, she'll be making thought-provoking mementos of the family vacation.

Postcards Home: In addition to sending postcards to relatives and friends, your child can write to herself—a card each day, describing what she saw and did. When she gets home, she'll find a stack of colorful mail that reminds her of vacation highlights. By punching a hole in the corners of postcards and knotting them on a ribbon, she can turn the cards into a small, pictorial diary of the trip.

Collage-A-Day: For this project, you'll need to take along a piece of poster board, a bottle of glue, and a pair of scissors. Every day your child can add to the collage by mounting newfound bits of vacation memorabilia: ticket stubs, swizzle sticks, brochures, paper place-mats, and maps. Special flourishes can be made with pressed flowers, a handful of beach sand, or a few flakes of mica from the hiking trail. The more involved your child becomes with this project, the more inventive she'll be in gathering mementos. When you return home, cover the collage with clear contact paper or glass and frame it.

A SELECTION OF RECENT BOOKS

The Seashore Book by Charlotte Zolotow (HarperCollins; $15.00. A picture book for the very young.)

A child who lives in the mountains asks his mother what the seashore is like. Her words fill his imagination with the exhilaration of an afternoon by the sea.

Strider by Beverly Cleary (Morrow Junior Books; $13.95. For readers approximately ages 8 and up.)

Leigh Botts has had a rough time since his parents divorced and he moved with his mother to a new community. But when he finds a dog who's also alone, Leigh cares for him in joint custody with a friend, Barry, and Leigh's life changes in surprising ways.

Angeles. This program ends with a performance of Disney's Young Musicians Symphony Orchestra on The Disney Channel on September 15.

Producing the special is the celebrated team of Smith-Hemion, who also produce The Walt Disney Company Presents The American Teacher Awards. "The idea for the program," explains Gary Smith, "comes from [Walt Disney Company chairman] Michael Eisner's passion for young people playing classical music. He felt presenting a symphony orchestra comprised of talented musicians of grade school age would have a tremendous emotional impact. I agree—promoting young people's love of classical music is important."

The special features selections from Mozart, Dvorak, and Beethoven, along with Ponchielli's "Dance of the Hours"—accompanied by a clip from the Disney animated classic Fantasia. "Interspersed throughout the show will be several profiles of the young musicians," says producer Gail Purse. "One of the most important elements is to show that music can make a difference in people's lives. Communicating the value of music programs in the schools is another one of the program's goals."

A new campaign toward this end has been started by the National Coalition for Music Education, which includes the Music Educators National Conference, the National Association of Music Merchants, and the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, Inc.

"Their goal is to help people understand the impact music education can have on children's lives," says Michael Greene, President of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, Inc.

"People still see art and music as a societal frill," he says. Only 29 states have graduation requirements that involve the arts, and the federal government spends 29 times more on science education than on arts education, according to the Coalition.

Yet research has shown music education helps children understand symbols, exercise problem-solving, experience self-expression, improve their motor proficiency, practice self-discipline, and enjoy shared work. Researchers have also found music has an influence on a child's language, social, and emotional maturation.

Aware of the value of music to education, the Young Musicians Foundation was created 37 years ago to provide support and encouragement to music students. The organization not only offers scholarships to promising children, runs a national competition for solo performances, and sponsors a conductor-in-training program but also runs the Debut Youth Orchestra, a pre-professional training orchestra for those 14 to 24.

Making music accessible to children is what Disney's Young Musicians Symphony Orchestra, the Foundation and the National Coalition on Music Education are all about. "We're hoping this program will say to the schools, 'How could you let this go?'" says Purse.

TRAIL BIKING: THE BIG TREND IN CYCLING

ber riding as kids. The big trend in cycling—for all ages—is trail bikes, the wider-wheeled and now-up-to-21-gear answer to cycling in the '90s.

Trail bikes are to traditional cycles what jeeps are to cars. They deliver freedom and versatility, allowing cyclists to cut across open fields, follow dirt roads, and explore almost anywhere. And, according to Michael Cicchi, an experienced cyclist and owner of a bicycle shop in Ventura County, California, trail bikes now account for 75 percent of the average bicycle store's sales.

"Kids are excited to do it, and trail biking is a great family activity," Cicchi says. He sees parents taking little children in bike trailers up mountain trails; scout troops trekking en masse up hill-sides; and families with elementary school-aged children participating in all-day trail-bike outings.

Trail bikes come with a wide range of gears, says Cicchi. For the average five-to six-year-old, he recommends a bicycle with 20-inch wheels and with six speeds. For an older child, up to age 10, Cicchi suggests a bicycle with 24-inch wheels and with 18 speeds. Despite the fact that all those gears sounds complicated to parents, Cicchi says even first-graders have no trouble learning the system and figuring out which gears work best on a given incline.

Trail bikes need to be carefully fitted to the child, and kids need to get used to them before hitting the trail. "Give them time to ride it, shift the gears, and learn the brakes," Cicchi says.

Once out on the trail, families should keep careful watch for hikers, runners, horseback riders, and other cyclists, since they often share the same trails. Cicchi also suggests riders remain alert and on the lookout for rocks, holes, and gullies. Riders should always wear helmets.

Cicchi says he likes to see each trail bike equipped with its own self-contained set of safety and comfort supplies. Those supplies should include a water bottle, tire tube and patch kit, basic small bike tools, and high-energy snacks. "Remember," he cautions, "it takes two to three times longer to walk the same distance as it does to ride it, so in case you have to walk for some reason, bring food and water."

After a ride, Cicchi says cyclists should wipe the bike down with a damp cloth. The bike should be cleaned once a month, oiling the chain and checking and adjusting the tire pressures. Because mountain bikes are built for rough terrain, the need for repair—if the bike is properly maintained—is minimal.

Trail bikes, which cost between $200 and $400—and up—are steeper investments than traditional bikes, Cicchi admits. "But," he says, "if you amortize the cost over the years the child uses the bike, it's not bad."

Kids Cooking BEYOND BOREDOM: GREAT LUNCHBOX LUNCHES

There are two ways to approach the task of preparing a lunchbox lunch: make the same ho-hum, wonder-if-the-kid-will-eat-it sandwich and fruit; or create a fun-to-eat, likely-to-be-accepted meal, says Karen Coune, an editor of the Betty Crocker cookbooks.

Coune says that the creative approach doesn't require any more time or energy than the traditional lunch. What it does require is thinking differently about lunchbox food. And because most kids have a well-developed sense of humor, even a peanut butter and jelly sandwich can prove exciting if it's cut out (with a cookie cutter) in the shape of a star, a heart, or a dinosaur.

Instead of a boring sandwich, Coune suggests that parents pack a muffin with cheese slices, or make mini-sandwiches out of small-sized hors d'oeuvres bread. Even cutting sandwiches into irregular polygons, she says, can interest children in eating.

When it comes to raw vegetables, Coune advises cutting them with a crinkle cutter or slicing them at angles to pique a child's interest. A banana, sliced cross-wise (with the peel on) can be appealing to a child if it's presented on a popsicle stick. (Just paint the cut end of the banana with lemon juice to prevent browning.)

For the young gourmet—and there are kids who wouldn't touch food like this—Couné suggests mixing grated carrot, olives, and cream cheese on bread. Or she recommends loose snack mixes, combining fruit snacks with small character-shaped graham crackers, raisins and nuts. Some children, Couné adds, prefer a small carton of plain yogurt with a sprinkle-on mixture of granola, chocolate chips, or cereal for their main lunchbox dish.

While dessert seldom needs enhancement, Couné suggests that parents let their kids make an occasional dessert necklace the night before school. The kids can string cereals, mini-marshmallows and licorice bits on a long licorice whip.

Don't get discouraged when certain foods return uneaten in the lunchbox, Couné adds. "Keep trying new things because kids' tastes change. If something is rejected once or twice, try it again in a few weeks."

But Couné also cautions

Together SCHOOL: FILLING IN THE GAPS

Just what subjects need to be taught in schools? Will national standards and testing ensure higher levels of learning? While the education debate continues, many parents are sensing gaps in the education their children are receiving in school. More and more, parents are interested in supplementing their children's school curriculum. How can parents do this best?

A MUSEUM IN A BOOK

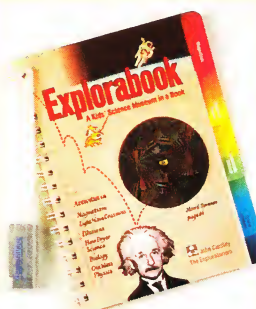

Imagine a book designed to include the best of the San Francisco Exploratorium, one of the country's oldest and best-known hands-on science museums. The idea behind the book is to give children and their parents a tool that goes beyond typical experiments, a book that actually entices and excites children to play with and to test science in new ways.

Bound into the book are a mirror, a refraction grating, a Fresnel lense, and an agar growth medium (to grow your own cultures of household bacteria). Attached to the book's spiral binding is a magnet. The book also covers light-wave craziness, biology, magnetism, magnification, touchless physics, optical illusions, hair-dryer science, and mirror experiments.

The Explorabook: A Kids Science Museum in a Book, by John Cassidy (Klutz Press, 1991; $17.95) is widely available in book stores.

Patte Barth, the publications editor for the Council for Better Education, a non-profit organization in Washington, D.C., that promotes better basic education for primary and secondary schools, says the first step for parents to take is becoming involved with the child's school. "Often parents don't realize what isn't being taught in school."

Barth says that in many schools today, the details are being missed. For example, a school claims that it teaches writing skills, but parents discover their child's work is returned home unedited. "Sometimes the schools aren't finishing the process," Barth says. "Spelling and grammar aren't emphasized as much as they once were."

Parents should ask the school for copies of its curriculum, Barth advises. But parents should also be aware that there is a wide latitude in how the curriculum is translated into course work. Barth encourages parents to review the textbooks their children are actually using in class to determine whether the books cover their subjects thoroughly.

But it is hard for parents to know what to expect of children in different grades. In an effort to help parents and educators grasp the bench marks that major professional associations in education have suggested for grades four, eight, and 12, the Council for Basic Education has produced a free chart: "Standards: A Vision for Learning." (Call [202] 347-4171 or write the Council for Basic Education, 725 Fifteenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005, for a copy.) Parents can make comparisons, using these national standards.

Once the gaps in a child's education are identified, Barth suggests that parents talk with the student's teacher, librarian, or other educators to pinpoint specific resources for the student to use. Suggestions for outside reading and good workbooks that will further develop a child's math, science, or grammar skills, for example, might be appropriate. Barth also suggests that parents help their child use an encyclopedia.

But Barth emphasizes that while parents are supplementing the school curriculum at home, they need to demand that the school offer all its students a challenging curriculum. "If the school's P.T.A. isn't helping parents accomplish this, then parents should organize another group. But the time to solve these problems is now."

At 4½ she's reading 3rd grade books

a child prodigy?

Prove it to yourself . . . with this 10 day free trial!

Reading is fun for Sarah—as it should be for every child. At age four-and-a-half, she's already choosing her own books at the San Diego, Cal. library.

She reads books many third graders find "hard going." Yet she won't enter first grade for another year.

Sarah is typical of thousands of children who learned to read with "Listen and Learn with Phonics"—a reading kit that actually makes reading fun.

"Listen and Learn with Phonics" was developed by a reading expert. It has been endorsed, after extensive testing, by teachers, schools, and educators.

This practical (and inexpensive) home-learning kit fascinates eager young minds from three to ten. The child hears the letters or sounds on a cassette, sees them in a book and then repeats them. This makes an absorbing game of better reading — with amazing results.

For example: Slow or average readers show sudden—often spectacular—improvement in reading and spelling. Older children often advance their reading skills several years beyond their age level. Young "pre-schoolers" actually teach themselves to read by this simple but startlingly effective method.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

I am tremendously pleased. My 5-year old is reading very well and I plan to begin with my 4-year old. I am so glad I invested in this set. Judy I. Gay, Stow, Oh.

Last year I taught grades 1-4. I had a 6-year old boy who came to 1st grade reading 6th-grade words. His father had taught him at home using your set. The father donated the set to our school. I was thrilled because some of the children need a lot of extra help with reading and phonics. Janet Griffin, Triangle School, Apex, N.C.

What a happy Grandma I am! Since I ordered a Phonics set and had it mailed to my granddaughter, Kim, and her 6-year old sister, they are both making A's in school. Mrs. Clarence Sparks, Clearwater, Fl.

KENNY LOGGINS UNVEILS A NEW SONG IN "THIS ISLAND EARTH"

To appreciate the hope, we must understand the very real dangers threatening our planet. The Disney Channel joins the worldwide campaign for global awareness with the National Audubon Society presentation of This Island Earth. Host Kenny Loggins, whose hit "Conviction of the Heart" (from his new album Leap of Faith) has become an anthem for the cause, unveils a new song written for this environmental special.

Performances by Loggins, and young hitmaker Shanice, are intercut with sweeping views of nature at its most breathtaking and most endangered. Testimonials from young and old are presented as part of the tapestry of our ecological heritage.

I spoke with Kenny Loggins at Andora Studios in Hollywood while he was recording the show's premiere of his new song "This Island Earth." "It's a love song for the Earth," Loggins explained, "that brings focus to the danger and encourages people to come out of denial. The good news is that we can all do things

A NEW DISNEY CHANNEL PREMIERE FILM

Little Rock, Arkansas, was the setting this summer for the filming of a new Disney Channel Premiere Film. Tentatively titled The Ernest Green Story, the film is based on true events: In 1957, Ernest Green took advantage of the Supreme Court's 1954 decision Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, which overturned the doctrine of separate but equal educational facilities, to enroll in Little Rock's all-white Central High. The Ernest Green Story is the tale of a young man's courage in pursuing his dream of the future, despite racism and violent opposition. Portraying Ernest Green is Morris Chestnut (from Boyz n the Hood; pictured below with the real Ernest Green). The film co-stars Ossie Davis, Ruby Dee, Tina Lifford, and C.C.H. Pounder. This inspiring tale of heroism comes to The Disney Channel in 1993.

Sunday Night Showcase

RICHARD LESTER & PAUL MCCARTNEY: TOGETHER AGAIN

Coming in November, Sunday Night Showcase presents the world television premiere of Paul McCartney: Get Back. The film chronicles an epic event in rock 'n' roll: McCartney's 10-month world tour, during which he performed 102 concerts for some three million fans in 13 countries. Director Richard Lester, who also created the 11-minute film that opened each concert, captured all the exuberance and spirit of the performers and the fans.

It was also a reunion for Lester and McCartney: Lester directed those classic Beatles movies A Hard Day's Night and Help! For Lester, filming McCartney's world tour provided a fitting coda to a relationship spanning a quarter of a century.

"What I most wanted to put on the film," Lester says, "was the genuine connection between Paul McCartney and his audience. I used to say that this film had to be a kind of love affair, a love story. We tried to recreate a feeling of romantic nostalgia that makes the film work on an emotional, as well as musical, level."

The Disney Publishing Group A CLASSIC DISNEY COLLECTIBLE RETURNS

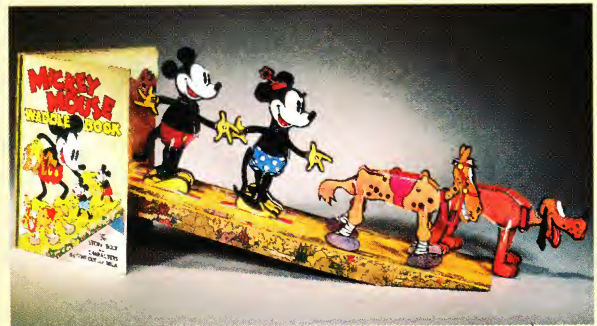

The Mickey Mouse Waddle Book is, without question, the most collectible Disney book ever published. Intact copies of the original fetch over $10,000 at auction. Published in 1934, it was not only one of the first Mickey Mouse books but also a unique combination of book and toy—a storybook in which the characters came out and walked.

Today, almost 60 years later, Applewood Books, in association with The Disney Publishing Group, is republishing the original work in a facsimile, hardcover edition (ISBN: 1-55709-187-0; $19.95). The facsimile is of an original edition in the Walt Disney Archives. There will be only a few departures from the original, the most important being that the hinges that make the characters waddle will be produced from plastic instead of brass. However, brass hinges for the characters will be available as part of a limited Collector's Edition (ISBN: 1-55709-188-9; $70.00).

Walt poses with The Mickey Mouse Waddle Book, a unique combination of book and toy. Today an original commands over $10,000 at auction.

Walt Disney Records THE DEFINITIVE DISNEY MUSIC COLLECTION

On September 8, Walt Disney Records presents the definitive musical retrospective: The Music of Disney: A Legacy in Song. Featuring six never-before-released songs and 14 hard-to-find original song versions from the Studio's musical archives, this three-hour, 78-song collection includes music and rarities from studio shorts, films, and theme parks from 1928 to 1991. The Music of Disney also features liner notes: an extensive 60-page, illustrated historical biography that includes interviews with the creative talent responsible for the music.

Among the never-released material in The Music of Disney are "You Belong to My Heart" from the 1945 film The Three Caballeros; "Nobody's Problems," an original demo track from Bedknobs and Broomsticks; and "Pretty Irish Girl"—Sean Connery's demo track that was cut from the 1959 film Darby O' Gill and the Little People. Musical rarities include two original Annette Funicello hits. And, of course, there are the songs from the Disney animated classics.

Beginning with "Turkey in the Straw" from Steamboat Willie, the 1928 short that first introduced Mickey Mouse, through the Academy Award-winning soundtrack to Beauty and the Beast, The Music of Disney: A Legacy in Song (available in CD and cassette packages, both with liner notes) contains some of The Walt Disney Studio's most beloved musical moments.

Above: Dave Stevens with Rocketeer star Bill Campbell. Below are scenes of Stevens's comic book hero in action. "Even as a kid I had a deep affection for the industrial look of prewar America." On the opposite page: Production designer Jim Bissel recreated Stevens's vision on film, including the Bulldog Cafe, a '30s ballroom, and villain Neville Sinclair's home, in reality a vintage Frank Lloyd Wright house in Los Angeles.

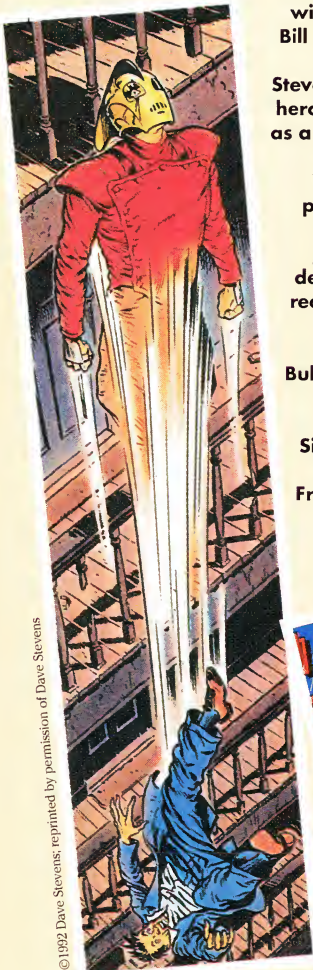

By his own admission, Dave Stevens was one very weird kid. While other eight-year-olds were trading baseball cards and turning gum wrappers into love chains, the future creator of The Rocketeer was busy clipping. He clipped pictures of '20s and '30s flyers, their outfits, banners, ribbons and planes. He saved photographs, hundreds of them, of Depression era air shows, airplane hangars, viewing stands, even employee costumes, because, as he says, "I knew I would use them one day."

And so Stevens did. When, at age 26, Stevens began work on The Rocketeer comic strip, the images from those clippings cropped up all over the place. The real Chaplin field, for example, which was the spiritual home to heroes Cliff and Peevy in the comic, once sat near the movie studio run by Charlie Chaplin, and the field was owned by Chaplin's brother Sid. Likewise the comic strip's Bulldog Cafe once existed: Stevens's aunt was a regular there. And though he was four when it came down, Stevens tucked its image away.

It is no coincidence that these images of another time pepper Dave Stevens's drawings. He's a man with a mission. "Even as a kid I had a deep affection for the industrial look of prewar America. I loved the sweep of art deco, the streamlined look of old locomotives, anything having to do with air shows, air races, power, speed, Buck Rogers, Flash Gordon, high-powered action and flying. When I started the comic strip, I wanted to expose a whole new generation to these things."

Stevens even put autogyros and his favorite "fat little bumble-bee looking Gee Bee planes" into the strip in the hopes that if the comic ever made it to the screen, kids would get to see them. Of course, Stevens didn't really entertain any hope that the comic would become a film. "Too expensive," he says. But then Dave Stevens hadn't figured on The Walt Disney Company.

When the studio decided to turn The Rocketeer comic into a film, director Joe Johnston (whose credits include the smash hit Honey, I Shrunk the Kids) was adamant about one thing: the movie had to be true to the "look" of the book. To accomplish this, Disney brought on Jim Bissel, production designer for such blockbusters as E.T. The Extraterrestrial and Arachnophobia. It was Bissel's job to take Stevens's vision and interpret it for film, overseeing the design of everything from sets to props to costumes.

RETRO WORLD

By Jamie Simons

Naturally, Bissel started with the clippings. Recalls Stevens, "At the start of the film I turned my library, all my photographs, even blueprints from the 1937 National Air Races, over to Jim to use." And Bissel and his staff used them all. Every billboard, every graphic, every pen, button, photograph and bottle is true to the period of the film. For Stevens, it was the vision in his mind given three-dimensional life. "The sweetest moment for me," he says, "came on the first day of shooting. I'd been watching the Bulldog Cafe go up, bit by bit for weeks, but when I got out of my car that morning, there was the Bulldog, just the way I'd seen it in my mind, right down to the flowers around the dog's feet."

Bissel claims the sweetest times are when his designs give context and texture to a character, "adding resonance and, hopefully, some wit." Take the home of the film's villain, movie star and Nazi spy Neville Sinclair. "When you have a '30s movie star, the first thing people do is put him into a Tudor mansion. But in this case you want to underscore the fact that Neville is both decadent, that's his Hollywood side, and rigid, that's his Nazi side. The early Los Angeles designs of Frank Lloyd Wright seemed ideal for making this point. They are all vertical lines, but with a seriousness as well. Perfect for a Neville Sinclair."

Ironically, the helmet and the rocket pack, designs that everyone associates with The Rocketeer, gave Bissel his biggest headaches. "The three-dimensional designs needed for a film are infinitely more complicated than the two-dimensional images in a comic," Bissel says. "When Dave drew the helmet and the rocket pack, his only consideration was that they look good. Unfortunately, it's not that simple in film. If we designed something rounded, like the rocket pack in the book, it didn't fit the human body. If the actor was able to move in it, it looked too small and inconsequential. If it was big enough to see, the actor couldn't move. We went through prototype after prototype, finally deciding on a NASA-like double thruster design, then streamlining it so it had a retro look. It was the same story for the helmet."

As for Stevens, he liked the rocket pack better in the film than "the toy bomb" design he drew in the comic. In fact, he liked the designs for the entire movie. "When this thing began, I worried that the design part would be the most frustrating. But it turned out to be a wonderful collaborative experience. I feel very fortunate that we ended up with something so close to what I put down on paper. In Hollywood, it doesn't happen that way very often."

THE MAKING OF SGT PEPPER

Twenty-five years ago, in the summer of 1967, The Beatles rocked the world with a daring album which broke all the rules of Pop music. "It was like writing a novel," says Paul McCartney, "instead of looking for catchy singles."

INDEED, Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band was a concept album of interwoven material and provocative sound effects, much more than a mere collection of songs. The album sleeve was the first to feature printed lyrics, and it was one of the first to have a gatefold, emblazoned with a portrait of the band in their self-created alter egos. Today, Sgt. Pepper stands as one of the most memorable works in the history of recorded music.

The Beatles were at the very height of their incredible popularity, and their eighth album captures best their essence as a playful creative team. Through the years there has been much mystery surrounding the project, but with The Disney Channel premiere

Sunday Night Showcase's Beatles festival begins with the U.S. premiere of
The Making of Sgt. Pepper,
Sunday, September 27, at 9:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific Time) of The Making of Sgt. Pepper, Beatles fans have their first opportunity to discover some amazing secrets from behind the scenes.

In The Making of Sgt. Pepper, we join producer George Martin at the recording console as he plays rare outtakes, rehearsals, and for the first time, the actual individual tapes used to create the rich and colorful sound of the completed album. It is simply riveting to hear a solo vocal by Paul, without the instrumentation. Martin explains that the title track, "a good ol' rocker," was written by Paul as the perfect invitation to "come and join our show—listen to us—we're a great band!"

Archival footage is intercut with recent talks with George, Paul and Ringo, who reveals that he refused to sing the original lyric for the second song on the album: "What would you think if I sang out of tune/Would you stand up and throw tomatoes at me?" Ringo explains his fear: audiences threw all sorts of things at the band in those hysterical days. And how could Ringo have known that The Beatles would never tour as a group again?

"At first, we were like nervous kids with the schoolteacher," says George Harrison of the complex relationship between the distinguished George Martin and the playful lads from Liverpool. "He was like the big cheese," adds Ringo with a chuckle.

One of the most intriguing aspects of The Making of Sgt. Pepper is the discovery of John Lennon's lyrical inspirations. Finally, it is confirmed that "Lucy In The Sky With Diamonds" was inspired by a painting done by John's son Julian. George Harrison also recalls walking into an antique shop with John and finding an old circus poster that would provide most of the lyrics in "For The Benefit of Mr. Kite." Viewers will be especially amused by the surprising inspiration for "Good Morning, Good Morning." George Martin suggests that much of the band's popularity may have stemmed from the fact that John drew his inspiration from very ordinary human sources.

And what story of Sgt. Pepper would be complete without an investigation into the making of the star-studded cover for the album? Designer Peter Blake humorously recounts the photo-montage assemblage of Beatles heroes, which ranges from Bob Dylan and Marlene Dietrich to Marlon Brando and Lawrence of Arabia.

Among the many contributing to this Disney Channel special is present day superstar Phil Collins, who says that Sgt. Pepper had "an amazing effect...how it opened the doors!"

In the closing moments of the program we join George Martin to learn about the album's final cut, "A Day In The Life." "It was John singing and playing acoustic guitar," he recalls, "Paul on piano, George on marachas, and Ringo on bongos." Instead of the customary 1-2-3-4, we can actually hear John doing one of his jokey countdowns, in perfect rhythm: "Sugarplum fairy—sugarplum fairy."

"Even in this early take," Martin says, "he has a voice that sends shivers down the spine." It is spine-tingling, and this program is a special treat for anyone interested in the history of popular music. For Beatles fans it is the discovery of treasures buried for a quarter of a century.

We caught up with Ringo just before this summer's tour with the "All-Starr Band" and asked him how he would compare the making of his new album, Time Takes Time, with the album he made 25 years ago with John, Paul, and George. A thoughtful moment, a wistful look, and then the only answer there could be: "No comparison." After all, what could compare with rock 'n' roll's milestone recording?

About the author: Mr. Bonzai, Editor-at-Large for Mix magazine, was a guest of John Lennon at the recording of "I Am the Walrus" later in 1967 and "Revolution 9" in 1968.

Come Let Us Adore Him

©1991 Samuel J. Butcher.

Since their introduction in 1978, Samuel J. Butcher's Precious Moments[®] children have touched the hearts of millions, becoming one of the most recognizable collectibles in the world.

Now, collectors can experience the special warmth and charm of these soulful-eyed "messengers of love" in "Come Let Us Adore Him," the first-ever collector plate featuring the magnificent art from the Precious Moments Chapel.

"Come Let Us Adore Him," recounts the humble birth of Jesus in the little town of Bethlehem. In a peaceful tableau illuminated by the golden glow from the manger, Mary and Joseph kneel in love and adoration as a cloud-borne cherub heralds the blessed event.

Portrayed in rich colors on a specially sized porcelain plate to capture the sensitivity and delicacy of the art, "Come Let Us Adore Him" is enhanced by a distinctive 4mm, 23K gold border. As an owner of this premiere issue in the Precious Moments Bible Story Plate Collection, you'll have the option, if you wish, of acquiring each new issue as it becomes available.

To become a part of this important collecting event, and share the inspiring message of the Precious Moments children, send in your reservation today.

"Grandma, will you read me a story?"

Once Upon A Time

by Judy Belle

Heartwarming collector dolls of fine porcelain.

Dolls shown smaller than actual size. Grandmother is approximately 13½" seated;
granddaughter is approximately 8" from head to toe.

No moments are more precious—or more warmly remembered—than those shared between grandmother and grandchild.

Cuddled safely in Grandmother's arms, little Susan listens intently to her favorite fairy tale. Now, acclaimed doll artist Judy Belle captures the special bond between a grandmother and granddaughter in Once Upon A Time—available exclusively from the Danbury Mint.

Remarkably lifelike...painted by hand.

The sweet expressions of both grandmother and child are astonishingly lifelike. Artful hand-painting makes little Susan's face radiate with joy, and brings a glow of contentment to Grandma's rosy cheeks. The dolls' posable heads and arms, as well as their lower legs, are handcrafted in fine bisque porcelain.

Charmingly attired.

From grandmother's cozy shawl to Susan's frilly baby dress, the hand-tailored costumes are charming. Grandma's floral-print dress is trimmed with old-fashioned lace. A luxuriously fringed border accents her shawl of crocheted open-work. Granddaughter wears an adorable dress and pink bloomers trimmed with lace. The upholstered ottoman and hard-cover fairy tale book are included at no additional charge!

No matter where you display them in your home, this captivating pair of collector dolls will fill the room with their heartwarming glow.

Both dolls have movable heads and arms, so you can vary the scene by changing their poses.

An exceptional value!

Once Upon A Time is priced at just $110 for the pair of dolls, payable in five convenient monthly installments of $22. Your satisfaction is completely guaranteed. To order, send no money now. Simply return your Reservation Application today!

THE CHAOS THAT WAS CASABLANCA

FIFTY YEARS AGO THE SET OF CASABLANCA WAS IN TURMOIL. THE FILM WAS A DISASTER IN THE MAKING. THREE SCRIPTWRITERS (BROTHERS PHILIP AND JULIUS EPSTEIN, HOWARD KOCH) CHURNED OUT PAGES OF SCRIPT AS THE CAMERAS ROLLED. NO ONE, FROM DIRECTOR MICHAEL CURTIZ TO STARS HUMPHREY BOGART AND INGRID BERGMAN, KNEW WHERE THE FILM WAS HEADED. TO THIS DAY, THE DEBATE RAGES ON AS TO WHICH WRITERS CONTRIBUTED WHAT CONCEPTS AND LINES TO THE FINISHED FILM. BUT ONE THING IS CLEAR: HUMPHREY BOGART WOULD SOMETIMES EQUAL HIS PERFORMANCE IN CASABLANCA, BUT HE WOULD NEVER BE BETTER. CASABLANCA PREMIERES SEPTEMBER 7.

DON'T MISS BOGIE IN THE MALTESE FALCON, PREMIERING SEPTEMBER 14. NO CONFUSION ABOUT THAT FILM'S WRITING CREDITS: JOHN HUSTON WROTE THE SCRIPT FOR THE FILM THAT MARKED HIS DEBUT AS A DIRECTOR. AND FANS WILL BE SURE TO CATCH BOGART, AIRING SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 13.

Inhabit the private world of rare white tiger cubs... a Bradford Exchange recommendation

In the depths of an Asian forest, white tiger twins anticipate a plunge into the cool water after a rough-and-tumble morning. Magnificent in their creamy white coats with dark brown stripes, the cubs investigate their surroundings with feline curiosity.

Now, artist Charles Frace's perfect rendering of this private world has been recreated on a porcelain collector's plate. And like exceptional first issues that command hundreds of dollars on the plate market, "Partners" appears to have what it takes to go up in value once the edition closes.

Some exceptional plates appreciate in value; some plates go down, and many remain at or near issue price. But the edition of "Partners" is strictly limited to a maximum of 150 firing days, and demand is expected to be strong. So, if you wish to obtain this plate at the $29.50 issue price, the time to act is now. To order your plate—fully backed by our unconditional 365-day guarantee—send no money now, simply complete and mail the coupon at right.

THE RESCUERS DOWN UNDER

Bernard and Bianca undertake a new adventure in the wilds of Australia.

In San Ramon, California, people can use drink boxes to stifle sneezes.

In Columbus, Ohio, drink boxes can be used for writing love letters.

In Springfield, Massachusetts, people can wash windows with drink boxes.

In one year, drink box recycling programs have tripled.

Last year, people started using drink boxes for more than just drinking. That's because pilot collection/recycling programs began in 150 schools. And empty drink boxes started to be recycled into new and different things like paper towels and writing paper.

Since then, drink box recycling has grown significantly. School programs have tripled to nearly 500 locations in 13 states. Curbside recycling has been added with pick-up at a half million homes in seven states. And now, even milk cartons are being recycled with drink boxes in most programs.

But while drink box recycling has made such strides in its first year, it still hasn't reached most communities.

We continue to work, and you can help, to keep this good thing growing. For information write: APC Recycling, P.O. Box 3794, Washington, D.C. 20007.
